

Pharmaceutical Executive Editor-in-Chief Patrick Clinton Joins Management Consultancy Oliver Wyman

NEW YORK, July 14, 2009—Patrick Clinton has joined Oliver Wyman’s Health & Life Sciences (HLS) practice as Marketing Director. Mr. Clinton has for the past six years served as Editor-in-Chief of Pharmaceutical Executive, the leading business magazine for senior executives in the drug and life sciences industry. In this role he guided the editorial direction of the enterprise and led the re-launch of the magazine’s website and the launch of e-newsletters, a webcast/podcast series, and blogs. Mr. Clinton also developed and hosted several leading industry conferences.

Michael Weissel, who leads Oliver Wyman’s HLS practice, comments: “Patrick is a seasoned professional who will help showcase our thought leadership on critical health and life sciences issues. He will be a leader in building the Oliver Wyman brand across key constituencies – industry executives, the business and trade press, and the talent market – to support our aggressive growth agenda.”

Previously, Mr. Clinton was Editor-in-Chief of University Business, a business and management magazine for senior administrators in higher education. He has also contributed to a variety of publications, including Outside magazine, where he was a columnist from 1994 to 1997. Mr. Clinton was an Assistant Professor at the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern University, where from 1989 to 1997 he taught writing and editing and served as lead editorial instructor in the school’s Graduate Magazine Publishing Project. He is also the author of The Guide to Writing for the Business Press.
