

John Drzik, CEO of Oliver Wyman, Named a Top 25 Consultant of 2010

NEW YORK, June 10, 2010—Oliver Wyman CEO John Drzik has been named one of the Top 25 Consultants of 2010 by Consulting magazine, which recognized Mr. Drzik in its "Excellence in Leadership" category.

The magazine profile highlighted Mr. Drzik's stewardship of Oliver Wyman during 2009. According to Mr. Drzik, "Last year was the toughest year I've seen in my 25 years in consulting. In terms of how we navigated...our people and the environment here are pretty entrepreneurial, even though we're pretty large. People were always looking for where we could serve our clients who were facing significant challenges."

Mr. Drzik joined Oliver Wyman in 1984 and played a key role in establishing the firm's leadership position in financial services strategy and risk management consulting, advising financial institutions across the capital markets, wholesale banking, retail banking, and insurance sectors. He was named CEO in 2006.

The author of numerous articles on the financial services industry, Mr. Drzik is a frequent speaker at conferences and has been invited to present at industry and regulatory forums sponsored by the Basel Committee, Federal Reserve, FFIEC, and World Bank. He is also the founder of the Oliver Wyman Institute, a cooperative academic forum designed to accelerate knowledge transfer between the academic community and the financial services industry.

Mr. Drzik graduated summa cum laude with a B.S.E. degree in Engineering Management Systems from Princeton University. He currently sits on the Advisory Board of Princeton's Financial Engineering program and on the Industry Advisory Board of the Wharton Financial Institutions Center.
